

Dear Ms SAID,

I am writing to apply for the Junior Developer job opening advertised by SAID Company.

It is my hope to secure a position with a well-established corporation such as yours where I can build my career and become a valuable member of your team. I have a bachelor's degree in software engineering and I have completed an internship that helped to prepare me for this position.

I have the knowledge to help support software program development and assist in the design of software applications and the development of prototypes. I also have the ability to create user manuals containing the documentation of all codes. I have the training needed to perform system tests to look for areas that need improving. My experience also includes trouble shooting and correcting software problems in a fast and efficient manner.

I have great communication skills with the ability to provide friendly and professional customer service and to relay suggestions, requests and other information that can help to improve performance, speed and to make applications more user-friendly.

I have the ability to solve problems as they occur and to communicate with non-technical clients in a way they can understand. I have excellent analytical skills and the ability to manage several projects at once while staying focused. I can follow orders and work as a team without any problems but I also have the ability to work alone and still meet tight deadlines.

I hope to meet with you soon to talk about this position and my experience and skills in more detail. Please call 0021651823526 for an interview.

Respectfully,
